

Randy L. Flink, Principal ❖ Christopher M. Gregory, Principal
Robert I. Kramer, M.D., Medical Advisor

August 3, 2009

DocOnomics* biweekly commentaries have traditionally focused on issues with domestic and global economic/investment perspectives because we believe these are issues that will have an impact on physicians in key areas relating to the accumulation, preservation and enjoyment of well-earned wealth.

This week, we're taking a somewhat different tack, since a critical eye has been focused on the healthcare delivery system in North Texas. A study on Medicare spending has been released, which reports that Dallas healthcare is not a good value and wastes a great deal of money. This report was written up on the front page of yesterday's (Sunday) Dallas Morning News.

Whether you like it or not, the proverbial gauntlet has been thrown down. Do you think it should be picked up?

Click on the story link below or subscribe to our blog for the full commentary entitled:

"Dallas and Texas Health Care - A Poor Bang for the Buck?"